Armed Thugs Fail To Break Into Acme Safe

State Police Announce Descriptions

THE TELEVISION program "You Asked For It" nearly had a tragic ending for Mr. and Mrs. Clair W. Dreisbach of 21 S. Eighth St. late Sunday.

As it turned out, Dreisbach and his wife, Dorothy, both 48, were slugged, threatened with death and tied up by a pair of armed thugs with designs on the safe of the new Acme Market in the Arlington Heights section. Dreisbach is the store manager.

Empty-handed, the burglars returned to the Dreisbach home and bound the couple more securely in an obvious effort to delay pursuit.

Dreisbach freed himself about an hour after the drama started and called State Police. A burglar alarm on the rear door of the store, meanwhile, continued ringing, apparently unheard.

Search Continues

State Police of the Stroudsburg barracks yesterday continued their search for a dark green sedan believed used by the burglars.

Neighbors of the Dreisbachs reported seeing the car, containing three men, near the residence Saturday night and Sunday morning.

Police theorize the gang was either making plans for Sunday night's attack or had originally planned it for Saturday and postponed it for some unknown reason.

Troopers Peter Walsh, Donald Hensley and Alex Kern released descriptions of the two men who entered the Dreisbach home.

One was described as about 30 years old, five feet 10 inches tall, weighing about 155 pounds. He was wearing a blue hooded sweat shirt, dark trousers, gray socks and black shoes. His companion was listed as about 35 years old, six feet tall, 175 pounds, with black hair. He was wearing dark trousers and a chauffeur's cap.

At about 9:45 p.m., while watching "You Asked For It," Dreisbach heard a bump at the side of his home, the television set flickered, then went out. Dreisbach stepped to the front porch to investigate.

Knock On Door—Meanwhile, Mrs. Dreisbach answered a knock at the rear door and a man told her, "Your house is on fire." Mrs. Dreisbach ran to a thermostat to check it and when she turned two men were in the house.

One of them struck her when she inquired what they were doing. Dreisbach, hearing his wife scream, re-entered the house and was also struck by one of the armed men.

Both were tied up and adhesive tape was placed over their glasses as blindfolds.

The armed pair demanded keys to the store. Dreisbach gave them the keys to the safe, but withheld the key to the front door.

The older man left for the market while the younger remained in the home with the two hostages. The older man returned and threatened to shoot both unless he received the door keys. Dreisbach gave them to him.

The older man and, presumably, his accomplice opened the front door of the market, using the keys. They then apparently went straight to a back door, opening it to provide themselves with another escape route. It was the rear door which tripped the burglar alarm.

Frightened from the scene, the burglars returned to the Dreisbach home where they tied their victims more completely, then left.

Gains Freedom—It was about 10:55 p.m. when Dreisbach managed to free himself from the cord binding him and called police.

Officials of American Stores Co., Philadelphia, arrived here yesterday to check the contents of the safe and announced that nothing was missing. There was no information available as to how much the safe contained. American operates Acme markets.

Two troopers from the Bureau of Criminal Investigation, working out of the Wyoming barracks, joined local State Police in the investigation yesterday. They returned to their barracks last night.

Ike Reveals Plan For Education

WASHINGTON, Jan. 27 (AP)—President Eisenhower today gave Congress his plan for a four-year crash program of federal aid to education. He asked prompt enactment in the essential interest of national security.

The science, slanted blueprint, designed to spur U. S. technology in its race against the Soviet Union would cost about $1,600,000,000 spread over the next four years. The federal government would pick up a billion dollars of the bill, states and local communities the remainder.

Three times the President referred to the emergency situation. He told Congress at one point: "This is a temporary program and should not be considered as a permanent federal responsibility."

Announcement

Eisenhower's plan was first announced in detail Dec. 30 by Marion B. Folsom, secretary of health, education and welfare. Basically it calls for federal aid to the various states for strengthening the teaching of science and mathematics, and federal scholarships to bright students.

"Our immediate national security aims—to continue to strengthen our armed forces and improve the weapons at their command—can be furthered," Eisenhower said. "Only by the efforts of individuals whose training is already far advanced. But if we are to maintain our position of leadership, we must see to it that today's young people are prepared to contribute the maximum to our future progress."

"Because of the growing importance of science and technology, we must necessarily give special—but by no means exclusive—attention to education in science and engineering."

Republicans on Capitol Hill praised the program as "very heartening," "effective," and "sound and sensible." But there were indications, too, that the plan might be in for rough sledding.

Sen. Kennedy (D - Mass.) had criticized it earlier for failure to include anything for school construction. Kennedy said he would introduce legislation calling for federal expenditure of about 300 million dollars a year for five years to relieve the schoolroom shortage.

Spokesmen Defend Co-op Tax Laws

WASHINGTON, Jan. 27 (AP)—Spokesmen for farm and other co-operatives today defended the tax treatment now accorded nonprofit co-ops.

Appearing before the House Ways and Means Committee in defense of present tax law were Jerry Voorhis, executive director of the Cooperative League of the U. S. A., and Harry J. Boernik of Seattle, president of the National Council of Farmer Cooperatives.

Witnesses representing business firms last week called for tax law revision to apply corporate tax rates to co-op earnings, whether or not distributed to co-op members, in the same manner as they apply to business earnings.

Testimony—Boernik testified that these proposals for tax revision were not intended to accomplish "either tax equality, or equity," saying: "Rather, they are designed to subject cooperatives to a corporate tax on money which properly is income only to the farmer-patrons and to subject the farmer-patrons to an individual tax on what remains of their patronage refunds after the cooperative pays a corporate tax."

The law now requires co-ops to pay the regular corporate tax on any margin of earnings unless it is allocated to co-op patrons in the form of patronage refunds, which are then subject to individual taxes.

Seranton Must Move To Erase Debts

SCRANTON, Pa., Jan. 27 (AP)—This Lackawanna County city must enact new measures to pay off an estimated $287,434 in debts for 1957.

An ordinance setting up a special fund for this purpose in the 1958 budget was nullified today by President Judge T. Linus Hoban.

His order directs the city to enact new measures and report on such action to the court within 30 days. Meanwhile, the city is prohibited from using the appropriation.

The 1958 budget for Scranton calls for the expenditure of $3,907,742 of which $87,434 is for debts incurred last year. One councilman said the figure could go as high as $400,000.

The court acted on a complaint filed last Dec. 30 by Emil L. Legman, 72, head of the Home Owners and Taxpayers League. Judge Hoban will hand down a final decree later.

Peron Departs From Venezuela

CARACAS, Venezuela, Jan. 27 (AP)—Juan D. Peron left the politically heated climate of Venezuela late today for the Dominican Republic, where ousted President Marcos Perez Jimenez found refuge.

The governing junta supplied a military plane for the flight of the exiled Argentine former dictator to Ciudad Trujillo, the Dominican Republic's capital.

Water Follies To Mark Convention Of Firemen

AN OUTSTANDING attraction has been signed as one of the entertainment highlights of the Four-County Firemen's Assn. convention to be held in East Stroudsburg the week of June 16.

The fund-raising committee of Ace Hose Co. met last night at the Fire House and announced that a contract had been negotiated with the Water Follies of 1958, billed as the world's largest aquacade and stage show, to make its American premiere appearance here June 17, 18 and 19.

Donald Gage, committee chairman, said both matinee and night performances will be given at Memorial Stadium. Tickets will be put on sale well in advance of the production, he reported.

The Water Follies is a combined musical revue in water and on stage that is fast-moving, has a running time of two hours, and contains 12 water scenes and eight lavish stage numbers, the committee reported.

It is presented in the world's largest portable pools and stage, 175 feet long and 35 feet wide. The gigantic pools themselves are a marvel of engineering ingenuity and take about nine hours to assemble.

The Water Follies is produced by Sam Snyder of Boston, Mass., originator of modern aquacades who turned Eleanor Holm, famed Olympic star, professional in the Water Follies of 1937.

Last year the Follies made a four-months' tour of Australia, attracting large crowds nightly in Sydney, Adelaide and Perth and playing before 190,000 people during a run of three weeks in Melbourne.

After an extensive period of rehearsal, the 1958 Follies will leave for Brussels, Belgium, where it has been signed for a 10-weeks' engagement at the World's Fair.

The entire cast of 30 performers will then return to the United States, arriving in time to make its American debut in East Stroudsburg.

Four Monroe County People Present For First Session Of Education Conference

FOUR AREA persons will attend Gov. George M. Leader's conference on education which opens today and continues through tomorrow.

Earl Groner, superintendent of Stroud Union School District, and Harry Drennan, president of Pocono Mountains Jointure and a Barrett Township board member, are official delegates. Walter Meinikoff, Canadensis, will attend as an observer for the Monroe County Parent-Teachers Assn.

Groner is chairman of one of the study groups and Drennan will be active in discussions involving board actions.

Leonard Randolph of The Daily Record staff is also attending the meeting and will provide local readers with on-the-spot coverage of developments.

Reports from Venezuelan cities and towns told of raids by civilian vigilantes and junta authorities on headquarters and hideouts of Perez Jimenez's hated secret police. Scores of ex-police and their informers were rounded up and jailed. Dozens were killed or wounded attempting to flee.

Guard Tightens—The junta tightened its guards around all foreign embassies, particularly those where ex-ministers of Perez Jimenez have taken refuge.

This move came after two bands of armed men opened fire for five minutes on the Dominican Republic Embassy where Juan D. Peron, fallen Argentine dictator, had taken refuge. The two bands were driven off by guards and later the Embassy announced Peron left the country, presumably to join Perez Jimenez in exile in the Dominican Republic.

The junta president, Rear Adm. Wolfgang Larrazabal, said the junta conferred all morning on the restoration of order throughout the country.

He said there may be a swing to the left in the wake of the Perez Jimenez dictatorship, which was overthrown last week. But he promised his temporary government would stick to the middle of the road. He also promised elections would be held in 18 months.

The nation's armed forces were solidly backing the junta. New governors were taking over in all Venezuelan states.

As for the fallen dictator, Larrazabal said all his financial dealings would be investigated by a commission.

Perez Jimenez apparently got away with many millions of dollars, the junta leader said, adding that a million dollars was deposited in New Orleans, La. two months ago ostensibly for the fallen dictator.

One Birthday For Family—FULTON, Mo., Jan. 27 (AP)—This is the one and only birthday for the Kettle kids. And it looks like its going to remain so.

Venezuela Junta Halts New Threat

CARACAS, Venezuela, Jan. 27 (AP)—Venezuela's revolutionary junta today apparently stamped out any serious threat of a counter-revolt by supporters of ex-dictator Marcos Perez Jimenez.

Junta sources said peace has been restored to 95 per cent of this oil-rich Latin republic. Perez Jimenez supporters who had broken up into small bands of machine gunners were being wiped out.

The small bands appeared to constitute no serious threat to the junta, but their liquidation was a top target for the junta before normal conditions could be fully established.

Reports from Venezuelan cities and towns told of raids by civilian vigilantes and junta authorities on headquarters and hideouts of Perez Jimenez's hated secret police. Scores of ex-police and their informers were rounded up and jailed. Dozens were killed or wounded attempting to flee.

Armed Force To Be Used If Necessary

ANKARA, Turkey, Jan. 27 (AP)—John Foster Dulles pledged to anxious Baghdad Pact Allies today that the United States stands ready to strike back against aggression to save the Middle East from "the scourge of invasion."

The U. S. secretary of state spoke in a flag-draped hall with delegates assembled for the opening meeting of the pact's Council of Ministers.

Dulles heard a call from leaders of Turkey, Iran, Iraq and Pakistan for more and urgent aid to combat communism.

"In relation to the Middle East," Dulles said, "the Congress has authorized the President to use armed forces to assist any nation or group of nations in the Middle East—and the Baghdad Pact constitutes such a group—requesting assistance against armed aggression by any country controlled by international communism."

Great Force—The Baghdad Pact group of countries can be confident that U. S. mobile power of great force would, as needed, be brought to bear against any Communist aggression," he said.

"And by the same token any such potential aggressor knows in advance his losses from aggression would far exceed any possible gains. This is an effective deterrent to aggression and a guarantee of peace."

But he warned the Allies they must have their own forces of national defenses.

"There is no push-button substitute for this," he said. "Furthermore such forces, with reinforcement where needed of mobile power, can save people from the scourge of invasion or perchance the deterrent failed."

Echoing factually behind Dulles' warning of the Communist menace were the explosions of two bombs which startled this conference capital in the predawn darkness before the conference opened.

One blew out the wall of a warehouse in the U. S. Embassy compound. The other splintered the windows damaged the stocks of a private American bookstore which is sometimes mistaken for a U. S. Information Service library, 100 yards away.

Investigators said it was clearly an anti-American gesture by subversive elements, and Premier Adnan Menderes of Turkey ordered an extra guard thrown around American installations. In Parliament, Deputy Baha Akist declared the bombings were no doubt instigated by Communists.

"They want to destroy Turkish-American friendship, but this is too soundly based, too strong to be affected by such means," he said.

The National Assembly unanimously adopted a resolution supporting his views.

U. S. Agrees To Swap With Russia

WASHINGTON, Jan. 27 (AP)—The United States and Russia today agreed on a momentous two-year swap of films, radio-television broadcasts and about 500 experts in everything from ballet dancing to horse doctoring.

Soviet Ambassador Georgi Zarubin, who signed the agreement with U. S. negotiator William S. B. Lacey, called it the most important achievement of his five years in Washington.

President Eisenhower applauded the accord, saying he hoped it would be carried out in the same spirit which has animated the negotiations.

Statement—"I sincerely trust," Eisenhower said in a statement, "that through such agreements a better understanding will result between the peoples of the United States and the Soviet Union."

The State Department issued a statement hailing the agreement. The department, mirroring Eisenhower's words, declared:

"It is sincerely hoped that it will be carried out in such a way as to contribute substantially to the betterment of relations between the two countries, thereby also contributing to a lessening of international tensions."

Heavy Rains Subside In New England

Heavy rains tapered off in New England today after creating flood threats along sections of the Charles and Neponset Rivers in Massachusetts.

A new disturbance developed over west Texas and eastern New Mexico. It dumped heavy snow from southern Wyoming through Colorado and into New Mexico and threatened more wet weather for the Southern Plains and Southwest.

Boston has been swamped with 8.66 inches of rain so far this month. This is 5.61 inches above normal and a record for the first 17 days in January.

Flood Observers—Flood observers forecast that the Charles and Neponset Rivers would rise by midweek to within three feet of levels caused by Hurricane Diane in August 1955. This could cause flood damage.

Rain mixed with snow fell in the northeast and northwest corners of the nation. Light snow fell from the Upper Plains through the Midwest to the Ohio and Tennessee Valleys.

Sunny weather with temperatures in the 40s or 50s extended over the MidAtlantic and Southeast States.

Cold air pushed into the Northern Plains and overnight lows near the zero mark were expected in parts of North Dakota and northwest Minnesota.

Yesterday's Deaths

Mrs. Addie G. Barrett, 76, of 1806 W. Main St., Stroudsburg, died at her home yesterday.

Albert M. Arrington, 82, of Newfoundland, died at his home yesterday morning.

Mrs. Margaret A. Jones, 78, Bangor, died in a Scranton hospital yesterday.

'Dead Man' Happily Reports That Story In Newfoundland Isn't True In Knoxville

NEWFOUNDLAND—The "dead" man not only ate a hearty breakfast but went on to teach a Sunday School class before learning that his friends and former associates in Wayne County were mourning his untimely demise.

Joseph Jacobs, now living in Knoxville, Tenn., is very much alive, he was able to assure his sister, Mrs. George Newell of LaAnna when she called on Sunday morning. Her telephone call had been prompted by a flood of condolence calls at her home.

Somewhat the rumor of Jacobs' death started at the Hawley-Greene-Dreher-Sterling basketball game last Friday and shocked the community he had served in so many capacities.

Jacobs was supervising principal of the Greene-Dreher school from 1920 to 1929, served as principal of the Hawley school, and then as assistant Wayne County Superintendent of Schools under Homer B. Ammerman. He returned to Newfoundland in 1945 and remained there until moving to Knoxville in 1954 where he is teaching in a private school.

His sister's telephone call caught him after he had returned from teaching a Sunday School class and was just preparing to read the Sunday papers, none of which, happily, contained his obituary.

Kadar Resigns Position As Soviet Premier In Hungary

BUDAPEST, Hungary, Jan. 27 (AP)—Janos Kadar, installed as Hungary's chief of government when Soviet troops crushed the 1956 revolution, resigned as premier today. But he retained the job of first secretary—boss—of the ruling Socialist Workers (Communist) party.

Western Diplomats—Kadar announced his resignation in a speech to the opening meeting of a new Parliament session. The address was his final report as premier. He proposed to take a lesser post such as minister of state—a Cabinet job without specific duties—and turn over the premiership to his first deputy, Ferenc Muennich, 72.

Western diplomats said the change will make no difference in Hungarian policy. Muennich already has said publicly that no policy changes are contemplated. The resignation had been expected. It had been rumored before every recent Parliament session as a move to correct what the Communists considered an abnormal situation. Kadar was the only man in the Communist bloc holding the dual job of premier and first party secretary. Acceptance by Parliament of his resignation is considered a certainty, and Kadar will occupy in Hungary a role similar to that of Nikita Khrushchev in the Soviet Union—boss of the ruling party, but without a high government title.

Kadar has a strange history. He was a member of the Hungarian Communist party during the 1930s and 1940s. He was a member of the Hungarian Communist party during the 1930s and 1940s. He was a member of the Hungarian Communist party during the 1930s and 1940s.

Jury Rules On McAdoo Girl

WASHINGTON, Jan. 27 (UP)—An 18-year-old McAdoo, Pa., girl, charged with manslaughter in the July death of her girl companion during a 100-mile-an-hour automobile flight from police, was acquitted by reason of insanity by a District Court jury today.

The jury deliberated only 10 minutes in the case of Louise Heinzel.

The Heinzel girl was charged in the death of Patricia Zabrosky, 15, also of McAdoo.

Trifle Island
The Zabrosky girl was killed when the car smashed into a traffic island on Rhode Island Ave. and then careened into a house.

The two girls had run away from home.

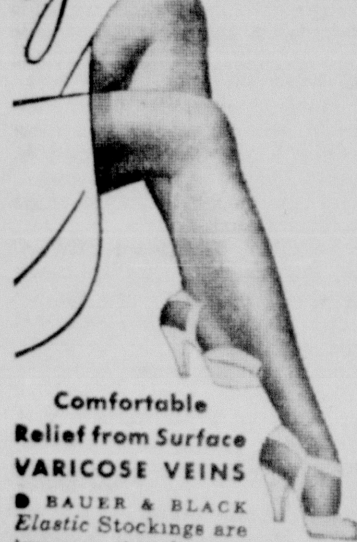

The Heinzel girl testified last week that she did not remember details of the accident. She said she did remember that her companion kept yelling, "faster, faster."

Current Winter Mild To Veteran Of Antarctic Stay

Floyd Williams, Jr.

By Don Allen
THE THERMOMETER outside read 40 degrees when the young man walked into the office wearing a light jacket, unzipped, a flannel shirt, open at the neck, and with a T-shirt showing underneath. His trousers were summer-weight khakis.

Forty-degree weather is not considered particularly balmy anywhere, but to 23-year-old Floyd Williams, Jr., it undoubtedly seemed warm by comparison.

Williams, son of Mr. and Mrs. Floyd Williams Sr., 17 N. Fifth St., Stroudsburg, was discharged from the Navy last Thursday after four years of service—13 months of it in the Antarctic.

Williams was graduated from Stroudsburg High School in 1953. Although he claims he wasn't much of an athlete, he managed to amass three letters in football and four in basketball.

A broken leg in the football game against Bangor High School in his senior year shortened his athletic career. Later, while in the Navy, an operation was necessary on the same leg.

Prior to joining the Navy on Feb. 15, 1954, Williams assisted his father at Rust's Garage. After boot training he was assigned to Mobile Construction Battalion Four, which did construction work at land bases throughout the Atlantic Ocean area.

Then the Navy asked for volunteers for the Antarctic expedition and Williams was among those who signed up.

He left for what might be loosely termed the Deep South in November, 1956, returning last December.

His initial assignment was as a mechanic, keeping in working order the equipment at McMurdo Sound, an air base about 730 air miles from the South Pole.

McMurdo was the only base at which the giant C-124 cargo planes could land. It has a runway 6,000 feet long and 300 feet wide.

Williams recalls that the air strip, carved out of the ice, was rebuilt about three times while he was stationed there. A major problem was removing snow from the lengthy strip.

McMurdo was the base of supply for the station at the South Pole as well as the Byrd Station, named after the admiral who was the first Antarctic explorer.

Williams was one of 86 officers and men stationed at McMurdo. But he had an even lonelier assignment than that.

For one and one-half months, the local sailor was stationed at Liv Glacier, 290 miles from the South Pole, with only two companions—a weather man and a radio operator. Williams' job here was to keep the engines running which permitted relaying weather data back to McMurdo, 730 air miles from the Pole.

Asked about temperatures, Williams grinned. He said that temperatures there at this time would be in the 30 degrees above zero range.

But during the Winter the temperatures at McMurdo hit 30 to 40 below, with the coldest 52 below. While Williams was stationed there, the South Pole station reported a temperature of 102 degrees below zero, believed to be a world's record.

After returning from the Antarctic last month, Williams had a 30-day leave at home, then returned to Quonset Point, R. I., for separation from the service.

Commenting on McMurdo, he reported the food was mostly dehydrated, but "better than could be expected" and that living quarters were "excellent."

All water—for drinking, bathing or other purposes—was melted from the surrounding snow.

Asked if he'd like to go back, the grin returned. "I don't believe it—not right now," Williams said.

Members Of Community Chest To Receive Full Allotments

Emergency Fund To Fill Quota

MEMBER agencies of the Monroe County Community Chest will receive their full allotment for 1958.

The board of directors, meeting at the Penn-Stroud Hotel yesterday afternoon made sure of that by voting that any deficit in the 1957-1958 campaign be made up by transferring money from a small emergency fund rather than allocating the deficit to the agencies.

E. Holt Wyckoff, Jr., president, paid tribute to Clifford Cramer, 1957-1958 campaign chairman, for his leadership of the campaign. The contributions exceeded the 1956-1957 quota, he pointed out, and said that Cramer had "done everything humanly possible despite adverse conditions."

Those conditions included the flu epidemic and an economic recession just at the time of the campaign, Cramer explained in his summary of the campaign, when he praised workers and the public for their support. Five of the divisions exceeded their quota and five fell short, he announced.

While additional contributions may yet be received, the board voted not to make full payment of agency funds contingent on those contributions.

A vote of appreciation was given to Cramer by the board, and H. G. Sanborn, Jr., chairman of the 1958-1959 campaign was introduced.

Expressions of appreciation were also given to Frank S. LaBar for his years of service as chairman of the finance committee and to the Chest in general. LaBar's resignation as a member of the finance committee was accepted.

Mrs. Carleen Waddell was elected to fill the unexpired term of Nelson Westbrook, now second vice president, on the board.

Mrs. Elton Denning was re-named as chairman of the social planning committee, and Mrs. Harold Creveling was named as a new member of that committee, replacing Mrs. Roy Peterson who has moved away. Re-appointed to the committee were Maxwell Cohen, John Dunkelberger, Mrs. Harold Pond and Rev. Norman Savage.

Two members of the board whose terms have expired, Mrs. Harold Ingraham and Walter Peeney, were thanked for their services by Wyckoff, who also welcomed two new members: Maxwell Cohen and Mrs. Horace Westbrook.

Good Attendance
It was one of the best attended meetings of the year, and Wyckoff in commenting on the attendance, urged that it continue.

"We are charged with the administration of public funds," he said, "and need the interest, advice and counsel of every director."

Attending were Edwin C. Hughes, H. G. Sanborn Jr., Maxwell Cohen, Leon Koster, Mrs. Claude Feister, Clair Smith, John Watt, Elwood Huffman, Mrs. Horace Westbrook, Mrs. Edward Knob, Mrs. Elton Denning, Mrs. Frederick Jones, Clifford Cramer, Joseph McCluskey, A. W. Munson, Detlef Hansen, Mrs. Eugene Martin, Walter Peeney, Mrs. Harold Ingraham, Mrs. Ethel West and E. Holt Wyckoff, Jr.

Boy Scout Executive Describes Present Resica Falls Camp At Exchange Meeting

N. HAROLD WEST, director of the Philadelphia-Valley Forge Reservation, Boy Scouts of America, was the speaker at last night's meeting of the East Stroudsburg Exchange Club in Grace Lutheran Church.

West discussed the existing camp which the reservation operates at Resica Falls on a 41-acre plot there.

He recalled that 83 years ago, when Frank Michaels, prominent local resident, lived there, the area was given over to industrial activity.

A school house which was located there has been completely restored and is in comparable condition to what it was then.

Each year, West said, the organization donates to Monroe County commissioners the equivalent of what the camp site would bring in taxes were it taxable.

West said that the present camp will accommodate 200 boys and was built with Monroe County labor. This year, another camp providing for an additional 200 boys will be built.

He also announced that $100,000 has been received to provide adult supervision for the youths. An average of 250 boys used the camp last year and it is expected that the average will be 500 this year.

Bruce Viechnicki, son of Mr. and Mrs. Zigmund Viechnicki, was named youth of the month. Dr. Francis B. McGarry was a guest.

Engineers List Study On Project

REP. FRANCIS E. Walter (D-Pa.) has been notified by the Philadelphia office of the U. S. Army Corps of Engineers that "there appears to be no basis for a federal project" to provide flood relief for Tobyhanna.

Col. W. F. Powers, district engineer, in a letter dated Jan. 23, notified Walter that engineers of his technical staff inspected the locality and discussed the matter with local residents.

His letter continued: "It was learned that the primary function of the dam which washed out during the flood of August, 1955, was to maintain a pond used for recreational purposes and as an emergency source of water supply for fire fighting purposes. No provision was made for flood control storage in the pond and it is believed that the dam had little, if any, effect on the flood problem in the community."

Bond Removal
"Flood damages in the low-lying sections of the community downstream from the dam site have been minor since the flood of August, 1955. The reconnaissance investigation indicated that the most feasible means of preventing these damages would consist of removing several sharp bends in Tobyhanna Creek below the dam site and providing a larger culvert for the stream to pass under old highway Route 611. It is estimated that the cost of constructing these improvements would be considerably in excess of the flood damages which would be prevented."

Powers continues that "economic justification for flood control measures does not exist and reconstruction of the dam to provide a pond primarily for recreational use is considered to be a local problem."

Powers also suggests that Dr. Maurice K. Goddard, secretary of the Pennsylvania Dept. of Forests and Waters, may be of assistance if local interests should desire to restore the dam and says that Powers will be glad to advise local interests informally if they decide to rebuild it.

732 Members Brought Into YMCA

THE FORMAL phase of Monroe County YMCA's annual membership round-up ended last night with a total of 732 members and $7,567 in fees reported.

Since a number of campaign workers have not yet made their final reports, it was decided to wait until a later date to close the drive. In the meantime, all workers were requested to file their reports with their leaders or turn them over directly to the YMCA.

Concurring in this view were Alex Bensinger, president of the YMCA Board of Directors,

In cases where contacts with prospective members have not been made, the solicitors were asked to finish their work as quickly as possible.

E. Holt Wyckoff Jr., campaign chairman, predicted that the clean-up phase of the drive will put the effort over the top. The goal was originally set at 800 members and $8,000 in cash.

John R. Wilson, executive secretary, the latter congratulated the workers and noted that the money raised is about $500 above last year at the same point in the drive.

Mrs. Albert Yutz' division carried off campaign honors by enrolling 320 members and raising $2,766. Last night, as in the two previous report meetings, the Yutz team turned in the best report—91 members and $766.

Alex Bensinger's division maintained its second-place pace by reporting 47 members and $481.50 for a grand total of 152 members and $1,654.

In third spot was Thomas Kistler's division which closed with a total of 133 members and $1,705. Reported last night were 27 members and $328.

Finishing in fourth place was Horace G. Walters' division. It brought in 32 members and $266 last night to boost its over-all totals to 131 members and $1,442.

More than 100 persons took part in the campaign.

Water Service Returned To Normal In East Borough

EAST STROUDSBURG residents — at least part of them — were without water service for approximately eight and one-half hours yesterday while workmen repaired a break in a major main on Brown St. opposite the Pocono Textile Mill Building.

Henry Lesoine, borough water superintendent, estimated about 500,000 gallons of water leaked through the main from the time it was broken about 9:30 p. m. Sunday.

Lesoine said he was unable to determine cause of the break, but pointed out that the main had been in service for approximately 70 years.

Workers who attempted to repair the leak early yesterday had to wait until a Citizens' Gas Co. service line, also broken, was repaired.

Most of the downtown business section and some residential areas, particularly in the Lenox Ave. area, were without water while repairs were made.

Service was restored around 6:30 p. m. yesterday.

Planning Solution

An agency within the State Department of Commerce has come forth with an offer which promises to break the impasse existing between the Monroe County Commissioners and the County Planning Commission.

The Bureau of Community Development has agreed to work with the county planning group and with boroughs and townships in setting up planning and zoning programs.

Donald Livingston, regional representative of the bureau, said he would meet at any time with the county commissioners and the planning commission to discuss either planning or zoning with them.

Mr. Livingston conferred with the commissioners on the impasse and said he felt that most of the preliminary work in establishing planning and zoning can and should be done by a local lay commission such as the planning group.

In his opinion, the commission should determine at least the general plan for the county-wide or regional area to be covered.

Not until deciding what is needed should the county hire a professional consultant or engineering firm, he said.

The planning group has felt that it should have a consultant to work with it in setting up planning goals. It has not gained official support for this idea, however, as the commissioners have refused to provide funds for outside help, at least at this time.

Planning commission members appear willing to cooperate in any way possible to bring about a sound planning and zoning program. A number of the members who were contacted welcome the idea of sitting down with the state representative and with county commissioners to arrive at a practical solution.

What Mr. Livingston has suggested appears to be the answer both county and planning commissions have been seeking. We heartily endorse the idea and call upon all parties responsible for planning to get together at the earliest possible date to work out a far-sighted program for the entire county.

Opinions Of Other Editors

Right To Trial

Robert W. Sarnoff, president of the National Broadcasting Co., is not only against pay television, he doesn't even want the public to have an opportunity to try it. He urges Congress to impose a permanent ban, without a test of public preference.

If pay television gets established, says Mr. Sarnoff, "it would destroy free television and leave the public no choice." It would deprive the public of many of the educational features which it now gets, says Mr. Sarnoff, free.

This plea makes ingenious use of words. The "choice" that the public is supposed to have does not exist in those sections of the country where viewers have satisfactory reception from only one channel.

Robert S. Allen Reports...

Not Silenced By McElroy

Washington, Jan. 26 — Generals and admirals are free to continue talking frankly about military matters — so far as defense Secretary McElroy is concerned.

He does not propose either to silence or punish them for doing that.

That is what McElroy told House Republican leaders when they suggested he crack down on critical Pentagon chiefs. The Ohioan made it clear he has no intention of resorting to such disciplining.

The earnest hope was expressed by him that military authorities will keep in mind the need for "an overall defense Department point of view." But that is as far as McElroy went. He courteously but firmly refused to muzzle or penalize outspoken subordinates.

This significant incident occurred at a backstage meeting in Capitol Hill, attended by House Republican Leader Joseph Martin, Mass., and GOP Whip Leslie Arendt, Ill., who is also senior member of his party on the powerful Armed Services Committee.

Try and other Republican leaders voiced concern about the barrage of headline complaints from high-ranking military officers.

Particularly singled out on that score were General Thomas White, Air Chief of Staff, and Major General V. A. Schriever, head of the Air Force's ballistic missile program. In testimony before congressional committees and in other statements, these two officers have bluntly assailed Administration policies.

To the demand of the Republican leaders that "this sort of thing be stopped," Secretary McElroy made the following reply:

"I've had some discussions with the Service Secretaries and Chiefs of Staff on the course we should pursue in appearing before congressional committees, particularly in keeping from making conflicting statements. In all these discussions I have stressed one thing.

"I have stated repeatedly to these officials and their subordinates that so far as I am concerned they are to testify 'so you can live with yourself.' I told them that because I consider it the most important thing any of us can do.

"Now in telling them that, I also explained it would be very gratifying if, in their testimony, they would keep in mind the importance and desirability of relating what they say to an overall defense Department point of view. I asked them to do that because we are a defense team. We are not supposed to be wholly separate services.

"But in direct answer to the suggestion you gentlemen make: There will be no attempt on my part to tell these officers what they should say, or to discipline them for what they say. I will not do that. That is my position, and I state it to you frankly."

That ended this discussion. The GOP leaders changed the subject.

New "Ultimate" Weapon — Development of a "death ray" is under research.

Such a weapon is now deemed "within the realm of feasibility," and it is one of the major projects slated to be assigned to the new Advanced Research Agency, that is in process of being established by Defense Secretary McElroy.

This significant information was disclosed by him in response to questions from Representative Frank Osmers, Jr., (R.N.J.), at a closed-door meeting of the House Armed Services Committee. McElroy stressed the highly secret nature of the "death ray" research.

search, which is being conducted by Navy scientists.

Following are publishable highlights of this important backstage discussion:

"Several constituents have asked me what the government is doing regarding the possibility of developing 'death rays' and other weapons of that type which travel at the speed of light," said Osmers. "Can you tell us anything about that?"

"Let me put it this way," replied McElroy. "We are exploring all types of weapons systems, including the very most advanced kind, some which might even be called 'speculative.' The best scientific brains of the country are engaged in this research. That research includes the field you mention. Beyond that, I cannot tell you any more on the record."

Navy scientists have been working for some time on several types of "death rays."

Bible Thought

Thou wilt keep him in perfect peace whose mind is stayed on thee. Isa. 26:3.

If our wills are committed to do God's will we are free from the responsibility for results. God will take care of that, we can fully trust Divine Love.

George Sokolsky Says...

Heroes Unsung

When a pilot knows that his plane is a goner and that he has a split second to make the decision that may save lives or lose them, he is a hero. He has faced the consequences of his decision and has dared to do the unthinkable.

So, Walter Hagen exhibited the courage and aptness such as gave Arturo Toscanini his start. With the conductor Pietro Cimara, was beginning to slump in the pit in the Metropolitan Opera House, Hagen, a second violinist, stepped up to prevent the conductor from falling. Had no one stepped forward, there could have been confusion, a scream, a mad rush, pandemonium, hysteria. Who knows what can happen when 3,000 are crowded into a theater?

But Hagen, 37, did step out of line. He was a little late. Pietro Cimara already was suffering a stroke. So Hagen seized the baton and kept the play on the stage. It was only for a short interval until they found an older and more experienced conductor to close the show.

Toscanini became a conductor because of his being ready, on the spot, when fate required him to be. Hagen should have a similar opportunity. In an age of feather-bedding and coffee-breaks of 40-hour weeks and punctilious graduations and seniority, of not sticking one's neck out and of not daring to get out on a limb, it is a mark of encouragement to see a young man stand up, see his duty and do it.

Although Walter Hagen was born in Munich, he came to the United States with his parents when he was three. His training, education, habits of mind and culture are therefore wholly American. His father is an organist and the family lived in Philadelphia. Detroit and Buffalo where they finally settled down. Walter was undoubtedly a prodigy because he played the Mendelssohn and Bruch Violin Concertos with the Buffalo Symphony when he was 12 years old.

He won the Rochester Prize Scholarship and studied at the Eastman School of Music where he met his wife, Carrie Fenton, whose father also is an organist and choir director. Carrie is a pianist and plays the oboe and the organ. After Among these players is a group of 30 called the Di Janti Symphonette, which Walter Hagen will conduct in its concert at Hasbrouck Heights in New Jersey. One day, he will conduct a full opera at the Metropolitan which already has one American Tanglewood alumnus, conductor Thomas Schippers.

Finally, the Maestro appeared, fully dressed in evening clothes, white tie, broiler plate shirt, long tails — this in mid-summer. The formality was a gesture to the greatest of symphonies. The audience understood and rose and cheered.

Mayor Wagner of N.Y. has joined with mayors of many cities in asking auto makers to build shorter cars. It's a waste of time. The Pennsylvania Story

Furman Must Act

By Mason Denison
Harrisburg — Enmeshed as he is in the boiling political cauldron on Capitol Hill, Lt. Gov. Roy E. Furman is his bid for his bid for the Democratic gubernatorial nomination would do well to square away his decks — fast — if he has hopes of getting anywhere other than the candidate trash can.

A smooth working, well-oiled campaign machine is a prerequisite, it might be said, to any hopes of a successful campaign.

This is one item Mr. Furman does not yet have — whether he realizes it or not.

The excuses for such an omission may be many and varied.

That point too is of no concern or interest.

The basic fact remains that campaigns today looking toward any degree of success have a format to follow — an organizational format as essential as wheels on a wagon.

For example, one of the prime requisites of a campaign machine today is a well-grounded working relationship with newsmen, the men who whether it be via press, radio or television, become the critical contact point between the candidate and the voters.

Members of the working press have more to do than fiddle-fiddle around awaiting the pleasure of any one given candidate.

Their job is varied — embracing all the candidates.

Their interest is not in any one candidate — but is concerned with every last one of the scrabbling office-seekers.

This inevitably entails setting up a top-flight, smooth-working press relation machine, schedule, or whatever one prefers to call it.

This, Mr. Furman has not yet accomplished.

This deficiency may be due to lack of funds. It may be due to lack of organizational genius.

We don't know and we care less. The why isn't the basic point in this case. The end result is.

One thing veteran newsmen at least have come to learn: a disorganized campaign machine is usually indicative of a disorganized candidate.

Two illustrations suffice to underscore the point:

(1) The campaign of Lloyd Wood, unsuccessful Republican candidate for Governor in

(2) When one-time governor and former U.S. Senator James H. Duff ran for reelection in 1956 — only to lose to Democrat Joseph S. Clark — the lack of coordination and organization was topped perhaps only by that of the Wood campaign of 1954.

In the case of Mr. Furman, any organizational set up is a happenstance deal at best.

Illustration: The other day this reporter telephoned his office.

Mr. Furman is not in, quoth a flunky at the other end of the line.

Any idea when he will be in? No, pleasantly replied the intelligent miss.

Any idea where he might be? No, came the intelligent reply. (Shortly thereafter we recalled that Mr. Furman was a member of the State Pardons Board was in Philadelphia for a meeting of the board that day.)

Straight stuff throughout — yet here was a candidate's headquarters already working on the bureaucratic-secrecy level. An indication of things to come? We're not interested in the whyfores or explanation — but we say again, let's get squared away Mr. Furman, fast.

Good Evening Ladies!

Skid Row Near Park Ave.

By Ken Duval

If you want to see characters, said this educated rough-neck friend of mine, the place to go is one of the establishments along Skid Row where the dregs of humanity congregate. There, he said, I could, in an hour's time, find enough characters to keep me supplied for the rest of my years. So I went.

What really persuaded me was my friend's assertion that I didn't know life in the raw because I spend too much time among the polite, upper classes, people who ooze culture and good manners and obey the moral laws. He had long ago abandoned this segment of society because, he said, he found these denizens of the upper world to be colossal bores.

When we had established ourselves at a corner table in a place he described as one of his favorite haunts, I ordered a beer (which he advised me to drink from the bottle because they don't wash the glasses here) and settled down to study the characters, most of whom he knew.

The first gent we encountered was a former newspaper columnist whom I also knew (no fooling) who had hit the skids because he couldn't get along with managing editors, a peculiar breed if ever there was one. He wanted a quarter and got it.

My eyes picked up a woman at the bar. There were traces of good looks in her face and figure, like a flower too long on the stem and now gone to seed. That, said my friend, was the wife of a bartender in a place across town. The man she was nuzzling? Who knows.

Operators Deserve High Praise

by Jim Riley

Telephone operators often catch the dicksens from people on the calling end or receiving end of the line. But, seldom do they receive their just praise.

In recent weeks our room has had two tough jobs and both were late at night.

On both occasions we didn't know the number, one in Harrisburg and another in Allentown. On one occasion, we weren't even certain of the name.

Both operators stuck with the task right to the end. On one occasion we reached our party and on the other we didn't.

Last Friday night Stroudsburg's long distance operator 87 did the trick in Allentown. I failed to get the number of the operator who handled our Harrisburg call on Wednesday night, Jan. 15.

They certainly are a tireless bunch and deserve plenty of praise.

Dr. and Mrs. John Martucci, Brodheadsville, were among those attending a performance of "My Fair Lady" in New York recently.

Both enjoyed the show tremendously, but Irene (who was in the process of developing a bad cold) fell asleep and missed a few minutes of the proceedings.

Too bad. But it'll take another year to get tickets if you want to watch what you missed, Mrs. M.

Mrs. James Riley Sr., my mother, wishes to thank those who have sent her over 300 cards during her present illness.

Mrs. Riley lives in Scotrun.

Bob "Casey" Cays, Reiders, ate 15 hamburgers Friday night. Bob is also reportedly quite a boy with the ketchup.

Bob is a senior at Pocono High School, Tannersville.

Ted "Brooklyn" Stevens, is still finding it tough to make the rounds on his injured knee. Ted is a resident of Stroudsburg.

Ernest Baumgarner, new pressman at The Daily Record, had two dates to remember during the past weekend.

Mrs. Baumgarner enjoyed a birthday on Saturday and the Baumgarners celebrated their 22nd wedding anniversary on Sunday.

Some candidates for a juvenile delinquency home were tearing down a road in a dicky rot-rod at about 90 miles an hour. A goon in the rear seat noticed the door on his side wasn't well closed. Hastily he opened and slammed it shut. The driver, without turning his head, snarled, "Who just got in?"

Sir James Chrichton-Brown, tells about a vaudeville impersonator who told his audience, "If somebody here will name a female character in Shakespeare, I'll endeavor to give my impression of her." A brilliant man in Row C hollered "Florence Nightingale." Unperturbed, the impersonator replied, "I said Shakespeare, not Dickens."

Erroll Flynn recalls a bachelor dinner he attended. The bride-groom-to-be had such a wonderful time he called off the wedding.

Just Between Us—

—By Bobby Westbrook

Fortunately for the world there are all sorts of people in it. And different people like to do different things, and can't understand why everybody isn't equally enthusiastic about rock and roll, or Dylan Thomas, or ice hockey or whatever it is.

The one that always amazes me are people who like to count things. I've had people tell me how many headlines I had on my page when, after writing them, I hadn't the faintest idea. I've known people who climbed the Washington monument just in order to count the number of steps, which any guide would cheerfully tell you.

There are people who count the number of Christmas cards they get, carefully balancing the number against those they send. There are people who count audiences, and very useful they are, too, since my own estimate of how many people there are anywhere varies with the amount of noise they make and how well I know them.

It's not that I don't enjoy statistics; it's compiling them that baffles me. But I do have statistics of a sort. There were more boy babies born since August then there were girl babies. And the way I know that is because we had an equal number of pink cards and blue cards printed up for "The Baby's Named," and all the blue cards were used up while quite a pile of pink ones were still left.

Somebody I mentioned that to said, "That's a sign that we'll have a war—more boy babies." And that's another thing I can't do—predict things. Not even whether it's going to snow or rain tomorrow, let alone long range things like long winters or wars.

Not being able either to predict or count things may explain why I'm always ending up without enough hours in the day, without enough milk for breakfast, and without enough ideas to go around.

Wedding At Mt. Pocono Saturday

Mount Pocono — Announcement has been made of the coming marriage of a young Korean couple in the Mount Pocono Methodist Church. Miss Jeung Hi Pak and Ung Pyo Koh will be married on Saturday, February 1, at 2 p.m. at the church.

Troop Hikes Through Snow For Meeting

Newfoundland — Nothing stops the Laurel Girl Scout Troop. Discovering this week that the hill and road leading to the Legion Home were impassable by car they hiked with five leaders through the drifts to their meeting place.

Under the leadership of Alberta Marsch, Loretta Evans, Pauline Gilpin, Mae Gilpin and Alberta Rochford, the girls held a business and work session. The seniors made stuffed animals which they will distribute among the children in the ward at a Scranton hospital, while the intermediates began work on jewelry boxes, badge requirements, and other scout activities.

During the business meeting, the girls voted to purchase badges earned by the scouts, out of the treasury. They also made plans for the February 3-7 cookie sale in which the intermediate and senior scouts and the brownies will participate. There will be a house-to-house canvass and the girls will sell the cookies as they go, rather than take orders.

It was decided that patrols will take turns providing refreshments once a month.

An investiture for five new scouts will take place on February 4.

LOOK - FURNITURE STYLES HAVE CHANGED

Ponderous is the word for some of the furniture we admired as little as ten years ago. Now we wonder how we moved around a room furnished with heavy bulky pieces like this one. Improved techniques of production and new materials have eliminated bulkiness and give even more comfort.

New type of spring, foam cushioning and more slender frames result in sleeker lines of the new upholstered furniture, which gives our rooms a more commodious look. This one from Hampton, becomes a comfortable bed when necessary. The exposed wood frame on arm and base accents the slender lines.

Cavaliers Seek Measure Of Revenge

EAST Stroudsburg High tunes up today for its second half chase in the Lehigh-Northampton League by taking on a better-than-average Phillipsburg High five on the Cavaliers hardwoods.

It will be the second meeting between Coach Doug Schoonover's Cavaliers and Phillipsburg. In their first get-together in December, the Stateliners scored an easy victory over the Cavaliers.

Eastburg, which opens its L-N chase at home Friday against Fountain Hill, will probably line up with Jim Kindrew and Alex Sydelnik at forwards, Bill (Bones) Hillman at center, and Captain Dale Metzgar and John Hindman at guards.

Stateliners 9-2 Phillipsburg will enter the fray with the best record-wise Garnet team since 1938. In 11 starts this season, the Stateliners have lost only two—a one-pointer to Wilson and a two-pointer to Nazareth. Both setbacks came in the last seconds.

A preliminary game between the junior varsity teams of each school will get the court twirl underway at 6:45 p.m.

Waist-High For Best Results

TODAY's sketch illustrates why we teach beginners to hold the ball waist-high, rather than chest-high, to begin with. From a waist position it's simple to adjust as length by the amount of push-away of the ball that's used. But from the chest-high start, the swing, with even push-away of only half arm's length, reaches the point in the sketch. By all means, try the waist-high ball position first. Also try (1) standing with the left foot advanced a bit, pointing straight ahead at the foul line spot at which you aim to finish your slide, or (2) keep the feet close together, and from that stance step out directly with the right foot (first step) in four-step footwork.

Gradually Dip

As for the stance, try an erect position first; then gradually dip the shoulders forward a little more until you feel completely relaxed in pushing the ball away and going into stride. A few deliveries should determine which of the positions works most naturally, and how much push-away you need for the amount of speed best suited for you. With a short pushaway, the swinging arm will be short and the speed medium. Think of the push-away as the means of creating speed, and depend on it for speed, rather than hurrying footwork and throwing the ball to increase ball speed.

Don't be too careful, because then you will shorten the push-away and cramp your footwork. Once the push-away is started, and your first step is taken, keep going to the line.

Sarazen Rallies To Win Second Senior PGA Title

DUNEDIN, Fla., Jan. 27 (AP)—Chunky Gene Sarazen, top golfer in the nation a generation ago, rallied back from five strokes off the pace and won his second PGA Seniors' golf championship today.

"I didn't know I'd get such a kick out of winning at 56," said the two-time U.S. Open champion who will reach that age next month.

Tough Rivals

The tremendous rally by Sarazen—he had a two under par 70—brought him charging past time Mortie Dutra and scrambling Charles Sheppard who finished with 82 and 75 respectively. Sarazen had a 72-hole total of 288—even par for the 5,889 yard PGA National Golf Club course, Sheppard, the West Newton, Mass., veteran who reached the PGA quarterfinals last year, was second at 291, Dutra, the Calexico, Calif., club pro who had led through the first three rounds, dropped into a tie for sixth at 295.

Under the draft rules, the teams will select according to the final 1957 standings with the last place team first and moving up in order to the league champion Detroit Lions. Teams docked in the standings lost a coin with the winner selecting first and then alternating in subsequent rounds.

Players expected to be selected in early rounds include Ray Brown, Mississippi quarterback; Mike Neatheringham, Georgia guard; Garland Kennon, Texas tackle; Don Stephenson, Georgia Tech center; Al Aucino, Louisiana State tackle; Tommy Bronson, Tennessee fullback; Dick Lasse, Syracuse end, and Joe Francis, Oregon State back.

Starting Wednesday, the owners will meet in executive session taking up such matters as congressional suggestions for changes in the league constitution and by-laws, schedules, playing rules, expansion and a player assn. request for a pension plan.

Bell and three club owners met today with an association committee and its attorney, Creighton Miller. The feasibility of a pension plan was discussed and another meeting scheduled for Wednesday with a trio of insurance company consultants in attendance.

Club Happy Over Signing Of Youth

BALTIMORE, Jan. 27 (AP)—President Jim Keely of the Baltimore Orioles heaved a sigh of relief today after landing bonus player Dave Nicholson, 18, but served no notice the club had not depleted its bankroll on one phenom.

"This is no one-shot victory," Keely said after the Orioles out-talked 14 other major league clubs to sign the slugger from St. Louis.

Young Talent "There is more money here than there is in any other place," Keely said. "We expect to spend whatever is necessary to get Baltimore any additional young talent it needs to produce a winner," Keely said.

The Orioles, who have signed eight other bonus players since returning to the American League in 1954, are believed to have $110,000 or more in bonus and salary tied up in the Nicholson deal. Keely said the exact number of years covered by the contract has not yet been decided. Estimates have the outlay spread over a three to five-year period.

Pro Grid Circuit To Open Session

PHILADELPHIA, Jan. 27 (AP)—The National Football League opens its four day annual meeting here tomorrow with the player draft the first order of business.

Commissioner Bert Bell will start the 10 hour job of player selections by the 12 pro clubs. Bell confirms that the final 26 rounds of the annual draft—the first four were held Dec. 1—are on the schedule, but says there is a possibility the owners may decide to cut the process five rounds. It would take unanimous consent to make the move.

The commissioner explains that the sentiment of the owners is to make the yearly college player selection a 25 instead of 30 round proposition. The reason is that any one club can sign only 60 players in all. With the regular season player limit of 35, if a club signed all its draftees it would have 65 players, five over the limit.

Draft Rules Under the draft rules, the teams will select according to the final 1957 standings with the last place team first and moving up in order to the league champion Detroit Lions. Teams docked in the standings lost a coin with the winner selecting first and then alternating in subsequent rounds.

Patterson To Fight Outside U. S.

By JACK HAND

NEW YORK, Jan. 27 (AP)—For the first time in 25 years a world heavyweight title boxing match will be held outside the United States when Floyd Patterson defends his championship in London in late June. The probable opponent is Joe Erskine, a Welshman who holds the British Empire crown.

Erskine, who was 24 yesterday, has lost only once in 31 pro fights. He was stopped in the first round by Cuba's Nino Valdes last February in London.

To clinch the Patterson match, Erskine must defeat Ingemar Johansson of Sweden, the European champion, in a Feb. 21 bout in Sweden.

Joint Statement Promoter Harry Levene of London and Patterson's manager, Gus D'Amato, today issued a joint statement after reaching "an agreement in principle." No financial terms were disclosed but Patterson, undoubtedly, will get a hefty guarantee.

Levene said he hoped to stage the bout in London's Wembley Stadium which can take care of 85,000 people. "I expect to sell out," he said. The promoter said he expected to leave soon for home "now that I have completed my business."

Both Levene and D'Amato refused to be pinned down on what would happen to the match if Erskine should lose to Johansson. However, it has been known for some time that D'Amato figured on boxing an American in London if Erskine should be beaten. It could be Pete Rademacher, the former amateur king who was stopped by Patterson last August.

Exhibition The last time a heavyweight champion put his title on the line outside the United States was in 1933 when Primo Carnera went home to Italy and fought Paulino Uzcudun in Rome. Carnera won a decision in 15 rounds.

Patterson and D'Amato also agreed to make a trip to London where the champ will box a three-round exhibition on Levene's next boxing card, March 25, at Empress Hall.

The 23-year-old champion, who won his title by knocking out Archie Moore at Chicago, Nov. 30, 1956, defended twice in 1957. Patterson stopped Tommy (Hurricane) Jackson in 10 rounds at New York, July 29 and stopped Rademacher in six rounds, Aug. 22 at Seattle. In 31 bouts since he left the amateurs after the 1952 Olympics, Patterson has lost only once, a disputed decision to Joey Maxim in eight rounds in 1954.

Mountaineers Hope To Escape Cellar

STROUDSBURG HIGH winds up its first half competition in the Lehigh Valley League today and the Mountaineers are dead set on escaping the loops' cellar in the finale. John Kupiec's charges get the opportunity when they host Slatington at the new West Main St. gymnasium, starting at 8 p.m.

Stroudsburg and Slatington will enter the fray all knotted up for last place with 1-6 records. Ironically both the Mountaineers and Slaters captured their first league win last times out, snapping five-game losing streaks.

The Mountaineers are expected to go into the battle with Ted Williams and Tom Gross at forwards, Ted Williams at center, and Dick Everitt and Johnny Gilpin at guards.

Tough Setbacks Except for convincing losses to Emmaus and Catasauqua, Stroudsburg has been in every ball game this year. A one-point loss to Northampton, and a two-point setback to Lehighton are two of the marks on the Mountaineers' over-all 7-7 season record.

Kupiec hopes to use the first half experience as a stepping off point for better things in the final half which opens Feb. 4 at Northampton.

A preliminary game between the Little Mountaineers and Slatington's JV's will start today's court proceedings at 6:45 p.m.

DURHAM, N.C., Jan. 27 (AP)—Duke fought off a late rally and defeated West Virginia 72-68, knocking the nation's number one ranked college basketball team from the unbeaten ranks here tonight.

Duke jumped to a 2-0 lead after 47 seconds and thereafter showed little doubt in marching toward one of the season's major upset victories.

Twice the Blue Devils stretched the margin to 11 points during the first half. At the intermission, Duke led 39-35, and three minutes after the rest period again had stretched the score, this time 47-37.

Lead Changes

With 8:50 of the second half gone, Bob Smith hit a jump shot and gave the Mountaineers the lead for the first time, 50-49. The lead seasawed for five minutes, then Duke's Bobby Harris scored on a jump shot and Duke took over for good 60-59.

All five of Duke's starters scored in the double figures. Jim Newcome had 20 points, followed by Bob Vernon with 18, Bucky Allen and Paul Schmidt with 12 each, and Harris with 10. Smith and Jerry West, with 24 and 20 respectively, were West Virginia's only double-figure scorers.

KKK Plans For Another Rally Soon

MARION, S. C., Jan. 27 (AP)—The leader of the North Carolina Ku Klux Klan said today the KKK will hold another rally soon in Robeson County, N. C. and "this time there will be more Klansmen than Indians."

"The overall picture will be a lot different," said the Rev. James Cole, South Carolina preacher who bills himself as the chief of the KKK in North Carolina.

"We don't expect to be broken up again," he said at his home here. "This time there will be more Klansmen than there will be Indians. I don't expect any trouble from the Indians."

The Klan's last meeting in Robeson County, near Maxton, on Jan. 17 was broken up by gunfire from angry Lumber Indians. The Klansmen, outnumbered by hundreds of tribesmen, scattered like quail as whooping Indians fired hundreds of rounds of ammunition into the air and the ground.

At the Indian community of Pembroke near Maxton, Simeon Oxendine—son of Pembroke's Indian mayor, and leader of the Indian raid on the Klan—listened in silence to a report on Cole's statements.

"He said that, did he? Well, we'll just wait and see," Oxendine said.

Cole is now fighting extradition to Robeson County on a charge of inciting to riot. The charge was made by Robeson Sheriff Malcolm McLeod, who said he warned Cole the Indians were angry over reports the Klan was planning the rally to warn Indians against mixing with whites.

"We definitely plan a meeting in Robeson in the Maxton area within the next month. It will be the greatest rally the Klan has had," Cole said.

Attempt To Settle Chaos

WASHINGTON, Jan. 27 (AP)—The first attempt ever made in this country to bring order out of chaos in the field of scientific literature will get under way in Philadelphia Wednesday.

This is the problem: Masses of literature dealing with every field of basic and applied science roll off the presses every month. For all practical purposes it then disappears, as far as most scientists are concerned. Less than 30 per cent of it is indexed and abstracted, and about 10 per cent of this is duplication.

If a chemist, for instance, begins moving into the field of biochemistry it is virtually impossible for him to lay his hands on the latest literature on developments in biology. This is true not only of this country's production of scientific literature, but that which is printed abroad as well.

State Police Drop School Assignments

HARRISBURG, Jan. 27 (AP)—The state police today dropped assignment of troopers to automobile driver examination details at high schools throughout Pennsylvania.

The move was described as an economy measure, a spokesman saying that "hundreds of man-days were being spent in that way when our manpower was becoming thin."

General Order

State police headquarters put out a general order that high school students, who complete driver training courses, must go to the examination stations which the state police operate for the general public.

The spokesman said that more and more high schools were asking for special state details to test groups of students.

SCIENCE and engineering together are first choice for 29% of MORE GIRLS than boys included in 25% who plan medical or nursing careers.

Examining Device

LONDON, Jan. 27 (AP)—Radio Moscow reports Soviet surgeons have designed a television device for examining the brain. It said doctors can detect tumors by the brilliance of spots on the screen.

What Young People Think

Teenagers High On Careers Of Science

By Eugene Gilbert
President of the Gilbert Youth Research Co.

"IF NOMINATED, I shall not run; if elected, I shall not serve."

It doesn't take much interpretation of that statement to determine that Gen. William T. Sherman didn't want to be President.

And it doesn't take much interpretation of our latest poll to determine that an amazingly high percentage of American youth just doesn't want to be President either.

The poll takers asked the young people flatly: "Would you like to be President of the United States?"

Only 8 per cent of the boys and 2 per cent of the girls said yes.

But here's a switch: 11 per cent of the boys and 25 per cent of the girls would be happy to have a son become President!

Most of the boys, however, saw the presidency in the same light as Robin Brown, 13, a Hewlett, N. Y., high school freshman.

"I can't see any young boy who'd like to become President of the problems and the world tension surrounding us today," he said. "It's just not worth it."

They'd Rather Be Scientists
Sarah Lee Saunders of Denver put the same idea in a lighter vein.

"Problems! Problems! Problems!" said Sarah, adding, "And I don't know how to play golf!"

If the great majority of young people don't want to be President, what do they want to be?

We asked that question on another occasion and 55 per cent told us they plan to enter one of the professions — science or engineering, teaching, medicine, law and the like.

Two thirds of these professionally minded young people said they want to serve mankind. At the same time, 52 per cent expressed the opinion material rewards are higher in the professions than in other lines of work.

Perhaps it won't come as a great surprise to find the girls more influenced by service opportunities than boys. Five out of six girls said being of service is most important while only slightly more than half the boys gave the same answer.

"Professions allow you to serve the community," the independent and live comfortably," said Charles G. Stenwedel, 19, of Kenilworth, Ill., touching all the bases.

"Professional men appear to be more respected than most," added 19-year-old Forrest T. Patterson of Burlington, N.C.

Some of our viewers-with-alarm will be glad to note that science and engineering together scored a high of 29 per cent on the popularity list. One girl in eight has her eyes on science as a career.

Teaching and medicine, each with a 25 per cent rating, were other favorites.

Generally, it was the girls who held teaching in the front rank. Only one out of 10 boys desire to be teachers while half the girls said they plan to enter the field.

It is interesting to note that the desire to teach apparently rises in the young men as they grow older. Only 2 per cent of those 13-15 years of age call themselves prospective teachers. In the 16-and-over group, the figure is 15 per cent.

More girls than boys plan to enter the medical profession. Our figures for that category were: Girls, 30 per cent; boys, 22 per cent.

"Medicine is remunerative, respected and enjoyable," said Edward S. Beneville, 18, of Ithaca, N.Y.

"I like people and always want to help them," said Paula McAuley, a 16-year-old from New Rochelle, N.Y., who has nursing ambitions.

A career in law drew the nod from about one in 10 while less than 2 per cent told of plans to become clergymen. One in 10 said they plan professional careers but are not yet sure of their field.

Doctors Get Top Respect
Except in the teaching field, the young people demonstrated their respect for the various professions is much greater than their ambition to enter them. This is particularly true in the clergy, law and medicine.

Against the less than 2 per cent who said they want to be clergymen, a whopping 45 per cent placed priests, ministers and rabbis on the list of the professional men they most respect.

"Clergymen are very happy, self-sacrificing people," said a 16-year-old girl. "They try to better humanity," added a 15-year-old.

Medical men and women are respected by 56 per cent and lawyers by 20 per cent. Science also drew a respectful 20 per cent and engineering 14 per cent.

The teaching profession proved to be comparatively low in the esteem by the young people. Only one in four named it on his list of the most respected professions.

Youth's chief complaints against the professional people with whom it has the greatest contact seems to be a feeling that teachers lack respect for them.

What can the teachers do about it? "Treat us like human beings," suggested a 15-year-old Brooklyn boy.

"If the teacher gave more respect to the students, they would get it in return," advised Oscar Hommel, 15, of Dallas.

A Massachusetts boy said he thinks "more firmness with the students" would earn respect for the teacher while a 17-year-old New Yorker recommended: "Give us less homework."

For recognition, you may have some difficulty if you go to extremes or are careless in important matters. But you are governed by the influences, and can benefit if you are ambitious.

Church Must Face Reality Of World

BUCK HILL FALLS — Colleges cannot remain unchanged in outlook and program in a world where the power struggle between rival political systems and organizations is a fact, a leading missionary spokesman told officials of the Congregational Christian Churches here yesterday.

Rev. Dr. Truman B. Douglas, executive vice-president of the denomination's Board of Home Missions, spoke on "The Church's Opportunity and the Crisis in Higher Education" before 600 delegates at the opening of his communion's midwinter meeting.

The church cannot dodge the reality of the world situation either, according to the missionary leader. It "cannot fulfill its responsibility by lining up, for example, in favor of the humanities and against scientific and technical training. When scientific and technical training have a bearing upon the survival of the free world in its struggle with the totalitarian world, the church cannot enjoy the luxury of refusing to make judgments and declining to take sides," he said.

Deeply Involved

"If the church recognizes any responsibility for action in society—if it has any sense of strategy, of focusing its action at points where crucial choices and decisions are made, it will necessarily become deeply involved in the task of higher education," Dr. Douglass continued.

In launching a two-year denominational campaign for strengthening higher education, Dr. Douglass described the crisis in higher education as "a prodigious waste of human competence as a result of inequalities of educational opportunity." Dr. Douglass added that "all those who have been complacent about depriving gifted young people of university training because of economic disadvantage... who have approved or have failed to oppose the system of racial segregation," or "have accepted with complacency the quota system in college and professional schools" have invited and contributed to the crisis plaguing America.

Dr. Douglass pointed out that the current crisis is not now and was not created by the Soviet Union's earth satellite or its other scientific achievements. "Indeed," he stated, one of the symptoms of the crisis in which we stand is our inability to recognize that there is a crisis except when we are scared to death."

He made it clear that if the church takes an active interest in higher education, "it is no less important that whatever the church does should be done for the right reasons."

Dr. Douglass warned churches that colleges and universities should not be supported merely as "necessary adjuncts to the training of ministers," nor with the hope that the church may be able "to insert its doctrinal propaganda into the curriculum."

Dynamic Force
"The church is to be concerned about higher education for the same reason it is to be concerned about any other dynamic force or movement that is shaping the affairs of the contemporary world and influencing the lives and destinies of human beings," he explained.

Along with making resources available for more students to attend colleges and universities, Dr. Douglass said the churches must "encourage the colleges in their critical and creative task."

He added that "it is evident that the crisis of higher education in the United States is directly related to our system of values... The church ought to be taking sides militantly in this conflict of competing values."

In emphasizing the need for ability "to choose, decide, and act," Dr. Douglass concluded by stating that "the power to act will disappear unless it is sustained by a faith which recognizes that while all human choices are less than perfect, there is nevertheless a Center and Source of Meaning that accepts us as we are, forgives our imperfections, and asks only that we have courage to act in behalf of the better, not the perfect."

200 Attend Annual Family Holy Hour

MORE THAN 200 persons attended the second annual Family Holy Hour observance at St. Matthew's Roman Catholic Church in East Stroudsburg Sunday night.

As an integral part of this service an estimated 100 couples also renewed their marriage vows. The Holy Hour began with a Hymn to the Sacred Heart, an act of consecration of the entire family to the Sacred Heart of Jesus. This was followed by a series of prayers to the Holy Family beginning with the words:

"O God, who in Thy Divine wisdom and solicitude for mankind, didst institute marriage for the continuation of the human race and for the mutual earthly and eternal happiness of men and women, deign to bestow Thy divine blessing on the homes of our beloved country."

Prayer For Dead

The service then continued with a prayer for dead members of families and the recitation of The Rosary, the hymn to the Blessed Virgin, Mother of God.

In the sermon for the service, Rev. John A. Esseff told the group of parents and their children:

"My dear friends: On a day, perhaps, a long time ago, perhaps only recently, you were joined together in a sacred union. It was sacred because God himself was the author of this union. This union our Divine Saviour consecrated in a special manner, giving to it a character of sanctity which placed it among the holiest institutions of religion."

"He knew the dangers which surround us and the weakness of human nature. He knew our need for constant encouragement in the discharge of the duties which have been imposed on us. For this reason He annexed to the worthy reception of this sacrament bountiful graces which serve to dispose the married couple to respect the sacred bond they have formed and to enable them to overcome the various obstacles and difficulties they may encounter in the discharge of the duties of life."

"Your marriage day was one of the most important events in your life and most intimately connected with your temporal and eternal welfare. The young couple who invited Jesus and Mary to attend their wedding at Cana were blessed and favored. With confidence then, in the promise of our Blessed Saviour we have invited him to come and preside on this anniversary occasion."

"We ask Him again to bless the contract by which you became one, and to remind you that by His grace, it is still a true emblem of that sacred union which exists between Him and His Church; a union of sentiment and action formed in virtue and the love of God; a union not only for time but for eternity."

Join Hands

At this point in the service the married couples joined their right hands together. Then they repeated these words after the priest—the husbands first, then the wives:

"I... reaffirm my marriage vows to you... to have and to hold, from this day forward, for better, for worse; for richer, for poorer; in sickness and in health, until death do us part."

The Family Holy Hour service closed with a pledge to Christian marriage. It was recited by both those who were married and the unmarried persons in the congregation.

The pledge closes with these words: "May the Holy Family—Jesus, Mary and Joseph—bless our families and homes."

This year's Family Holy Hour was a very successful one, from the standpoint of attendance and interest, Father Esseff and Rev. Francis Barrett, who assisted in the service, said. Chairman of the Holy Hour committee for the Knights of Columbus, Father Butler Council, was Dr. Lincoln Kutsher.

Legislator Urges Smaller Autos

WASHINGTON, Jan. 27 (AP)—Sen. Bush (R-Conn.) said today that unless American manufacturers start making smaller cars they may find they have "priced themselves out of the market."

In a Senate speech, he called current American models "gargantuan monsters" that are "too big, too fast, too powerful" and said they require too much parking space.

Christian Church Faces Hurdles In Coming Years

BUCK HILL FALLS—One of America's leading foreign missions executives yesterday warned that the Christian Church is "the only hope of true universality" beyond "simple membership in the United Nations and a vague humanism."

Rev. Dr. Alford Carleton, executive vice-president of the American Board of Commissioners for Foreign Missions, advocated strengthening united national churches and national Christian councils of churches in African and Asian countries.

"Denominationalism, and still more confessionalism, is a tragedy in Asia and Africa today," he stated.

Dr. Carleton spoke before 600 officials of missionary boards and other agencies of the Congregational Christian Churches assembled here for their midwinter meeting.

Not Yet Clear

It is not yet clear, according to Dr. Carleton, whether the Christian Church will come out in the 21st century as "a happy memory of the Savior, an underground movement, the ethnic cult of the Caucasian race," or "a world faith."

Dr. Carleton warned Christians of America and other lands that they must "put-out, out-live and if need be out-die the non-Christians." If Christianity is to escape extinction.

Dr. Carleton just returned from International Missionary

Council meeting in Ghana and a tour of Africa, observed that "over the world as a whole nationalism is on the up, often with a strong religious coloration. Many people see Americans as those who sit and toast marshmallows by the flames of a world on fire."

"It is easy," he continued, "to bring statistics of a phenomenal growth of Christians in many areas. It is easy to find evidence of the key positions of Christians in places of government, responsibility and social leadership. It is easy to indicate the growing self-awareness of the Christian Church as a power in the world. No one who has been to such conferences as Prapat, Indonesia or Ghana would hesitate in saying that the Christian leaders of Africa and Asia are among the finest in the world."

Dr. Carleton, on the basis of his newly gathered data on Africa and Asia, believes that a Christian attitude toward today's world must include not only "terrible urgency" but "holding in balance a variety of facts and situations far more complicated" than are customarily understood. "There are few situations wholly black or white," he said. Christians need "broad toleration and at the same time discerning and implacable loyalty to truth."

Thurmond Raps Toll Television

WASHINGTON, Jan. 27 (AP)—Sen. Thurmond (D-SC) asked the Senate today to declare opposition to any trial of toll TV programs for home viewers.

In a Senate speech, he said the immediate need is to prevent the Federal Communications Commission from "setting forth on a course of action from which there may be no turning back." The FCC has announced it will consider applications for a trial of toll TV.

Toll television, Thurmond said, would compete with and in some cases "completely black out the free television programs that give our commercial stations their best source of revenue."

Reasons Are Plentiful

'Mothers March On Polio' Makes Appeal

WHY HAVE a "Mother's March on Polio" now that the Salk vaccine has almost wiped out epidemic proportions of new paralysis?

In an effort to explain this to local clergymen and residents of Monroe County, Dorothy Storms has written a "letter."

Mrs. Storms is chairman of this year's "Mothers' March." Again this year, as in the past, the drive is being conducted by the Business and Professional Women's Club of Stroudsburg.

This is the way Mrs. Storms explains the reason for the "March."

"The Stroudsburg Business and Professional Women's Club has again accepted the assignment of sponsoring a Mothers' March on Polio and would appreciate your assistance in making our venture a success by announcing this on Sunday morning, Jan. 26, from your pulpit appealing to your people for support of this worthy cause."

"The Mothers' March" on Polio will take place Tuesday, Jan. 28, between the hours of 6:30 and 7:30 p.m.

"In the glow of gratitude for the thrilling reduction in new polio cases this year, many of our people have the mistaken idea that the vaccine has made victory over polio complete. Actually there is much work to be done and we must awaken our neighbors to this and the following facts:

"The hopes of the patients in respiratory centers and of post-polios across the country must be strengthened. Survival for most of them has been a great victory in itself. But survival alone is not enough. The marvelous techniques of modern rehabilitation have made it possible for many of the disabled to achieve new victories. We must give them their chance for better, more useful and worthwhile living.

"If we are to continue the good that has been accomplished through the past 20 years in our fight against this dreadful disease with its damaging after effects, then we will need the financial assistance of all who are in a position to contribute.

"We feel sure that the thousands of patients in our National Foundation Chapter treasuries of human hurt and hope will be forever grateful to those who aid them in their battle to conquer the disease that plagues them.

"For your assistance to us by helping to make the Mother's March on Polio a success, we sincerely thank you."
